Definitions of variables included only in PNRF Extra

Administrative review program indicator

Variable Name: ADMINISTRATIVE_REVIEW_IND (1980 to 2013)

Format: Numeric.

Population covered: Immigrants admitted to Canada since 1980.

Definition: Indicates if an immigrant landed under the Administrative review program. In May 1986, a backlog of 25,000 refugee claims in Canada was transferred to the Administrative Review Program. This program was neither an amnesty nor a refugee status determination procedure. Rather, the selection test focused on whether claimants had close relatives in Canada willing and able to provide support, or whether claimants were economically established or demonstrated the potential to become so, and on whether the claimants might suffer adversity should they be returned to their country of origin. The Administrative Review determined approximately 25,000 cases, representing an estimated 31-32,000 persons. Almost 25,000 landings resulted, indicating an overall acceptance rate of 80%. The caseload was completed by October 1987. Claimants who did not meet the selection standards of the Administrative Review were able to pursue their original claims in the refugee status determination system.

Backlog clearance program indicator

Variable Name: BACKLOG_CLEARANCE_IND (1980 to 2013)

Format: Numeric.

Population covered: Immigrants admitted to Canada since 1980.

Definition: Indicates if an immigrant was granted permanent resident status as part of the 1989 Refugee Backlog Clearance Program (RBCP).

Over 100,000 claimants arrived between May 1986 and December 1988. As a result, a backlog of another 95,000 claims had accumulated by the end of 1988. When the Refugee Status Advisory Committee was replaced by the Immigration and Refugee Board (IRB) on January 1, 1989, the backlog of claims was transferred to the Backlog Clearance Program. The Backlog Clearance operated on principles that paralleled the new refugee status determination system. Claimants who were determined to have a credible basis to their claim (comparable to the first stage of the new system) were allowed to apply for landing from within Canada. To qualify for landing, the applicants had to meet statutory requirements (medical and security checks) and not be dependent on public welfare. Otherwise, they were referred back to the IRB. Claimants were also allowed to apply for landing if warranted by humanitarian and compassionate factors. For those not accepted, voluntary departure was encouraged by offering letters of introduction to visa officers to facilitate applying for immigration from abroad. The Backlog Clearance Program concluded its hearings in June 1993. Almost 62,000 cases were accepted, approximately 32,000 on a credible basis and 30,000 on humanitarian and compassionate grounds. These cases represented over 75,000 persons. The overall acceptance rate was 65%.

Format: Numeric.

Population covered: Immigrants admitted to Canada since 1980.

Definition: Harmonized immigration base category, i.e. the 1952 act's specific immigration category codes converted into the 1976 act's immigration category codes, the 1976 act's and the 2002 act's immigration category codes (as is). Also, the Humanitarian and Compassionate fix developed in the context of Immigration and Refugee Protection Act (IRPA) implementation is included in this immigration category field.
